Patriots are just waiting for someone to fire the first shot.

If BLM/ANTIFA shows up, they will probably get blasted before they get a chance by someone with an itchy trigger finger. And from there all 1776 breaks loose

29 ▼ The real journalists are mostly the one-man or one-woman shop guys these days. Alexandra Steele, Andy Ngo, Miles Cheong, Portland Andy. Some of the start-ups are OK too, like RSBN and OAN. Occasionally there's something real from the foreign outlets like RT or the oddball places like NTD / Epoch Times. Once in a while some decent content makes it to Zerohedge. The Big Name outfits have been devoid of real news for decades.

21 ▼ “ Patriots are just waiting for someone to fire the first shot.

This is my impression as well. Most patriots are not chickens, but they habitually wait on orders issued by the Commander-In-Chief. That's not an unreasonable stance if they can store guns and ammo at locations just outside DC (like in Norther VA and MD) and get back there to retrieve them when they are to unleash on the traitors. 2 more days should be all clear if we need to be our own Commander-In-Chiefs.

44 ▼ Except the "first shots" have already been fired. Conservatives have been picked off, several killed. They stole the fucking election.

There isn't going to be a larger glowing sign of "time to deal with the problem". It's also why I'm tired of cuckservatives. "I'm waiting for orders!" "I'm trusting the plan!" Most of the people here are just going to move the goal posts again come the 6th and leave the rest of us to do this on our own.

10 ▼ The trouble as I see it is the following:

European cultures arose on a continent where long term planning and delayed gratification were key to survival due to harsh winters, short growing seasons, and the threats of war and invasion. This inevitably leads to a societies of high trust, which is why Americans were traditionally able to do business on a handshake, but other cultures cannot.

The delayed gratification (time preference) also means that we are very slow to make huge changes because we evolved only by harnessing stability in an unpredictable world.

However, when the Zeitgeist finally makes its appointment with Western Civilization, nothing can compare. For fuck's sake, we invented the trebuchet, the machine gun, the stealth bomber, and the nuclear weapon.

The message from our history couldn't be more clear. We are slow to anger, but our wrath is horrible.

Fuck around and find out.

10 ▼ There's a 4chan screen cap floating around that says stuff to that effect. Basically, white people stopped doing war because we know what it looks like. We know how horrifying it is, and that was before we had weapons that can be fired remotely. The last people to get us truly angry (imperial Japan) drove us to literally invent new science so we could explode their cities better. We've only stopped fighting because we don't exactly know what to do with nukes yet

Europeans (and Americans by extension) are altruistic at heart. We are very tolerant and caring of others, as long as they can prove themselves worthy. If they can't, well, eventually Hitler starts showing up to "handle" the "problem." Your move, rest of the world. Stop fucking around before you have to find out. Time is running short

▼ You really think the DC police can can put even 100,000 Patriots in a holding cell for 48 hours?

Every Antifa/BLM event so far has been done with a crew of less than 5,000 people rioting.

Maybe the DC police think the Patriots will be obedient and peaceful, like the 1 million+ strong March for Life is every year.

They know the presence of 100's of thousands. But they were all peaceful.

What's assembling in DC right now is a peaceful powder keg - we will be peaceful as long as , stay out of our way, if I read the mood correctly.

- A deep betrayal of Trump
- An assassination attempt - successful or not, wouldn't matter
- DC police trying to open up a getaway exit for Congress by force
- Antifa/BLM attacking with the DC police's blessing (including corralling)
- a certification of the fraud

Or any combination of the above.

There might be a few taken into custody, but the mood of the Patriots right now is to deny police doing this - to rescue a Patriot from DC police.

The DC police would be absolutely stupid to try and enforce the gun ban on anything more than a microscopic, insignificant scale.

17 Other threads here have detailed that out....even giving the diagrams or the most often used exits.

The push is to surround not just the Capitol building, but to move out into the surrounding neighborhood and seal off access/exit from these underground garages and tunnels, too.

It's those areas I'd think the greatest likelihood of clashing with the DC police and/or Antifa/BLM would occur.

5 ▼ We've had several peaceful (if you don't count antifags attacking after dark) rallies in DC already. They know our numbers because they know how many of us voted for Trump. The reality is, another peaceful demonstration isn't going to matter one bit. Unless people are going and planning to kick off 1776 v2.0, then it's a big waste of time.

We've seen peaceful rallies don't get results. What does? Burning and looting and destruction. BLM and the antifags know this, and that's why they are feared by the politicians and the courts. On 1/6, all the politicians will look out the window at the peaceful Trump supporters, say aww, how cute, and then proceed to fuck us all in the ass. I know I will get flamed for "dooming" but this is the cold hard reality.

1 ▼ I guess I did misunderstand ol.

I certainly don't mean to just show and neither do other patriots going but I don't expect everyone going to be like us. It's still better to have those people that don't want to be confrontational to still come then to not have them come at all. Guess that was my point with my original comment.

2 i cant tell if people are larping or not.

people are very very angry right now and some people dont have good outlooks, families, jobs to care about. you might. but not everyone.

Some people are really fucking mad right now and I wouldnt be surprised if someone WANTED them to try and arrest them as an excuse to start shooting.

I do want you all to know that I dont work for the state, but attack DC is not always wise as the secret service does have secret weapons caches supposedly of stuff higher tech than the public has all around DC.

if you're going to probably do something entirely dangerous and potentially stupid, just be aware of it. if

19 Couple things:

- open carry in DC is illegal
- Cops will confront you if you open carry.

Do the following:

- Come heavily armed and in groups if you open carry.
- Conceal carry and avoid drawing the cops attention to yourself

16 Word on the street is many will be armed.

They are color-coordinated as follows:

They will be wearing all black.

They will have skinny jeans, and under-developed legs and upper-body.

This is by design and for agility, where they are known to be quite hot-footed.

Don't tell the police that these people are carrying.

Hopefully they are not reading the post.

dialogue with those of you who would be willing to share your thoughts with me.

In short, I am torn between being armed "on principal" for this particular rally and balancing the risks of that decision with the practical considerations of having a home and family to look after.

For context, I am bringing a small group from Philly. We would like to be armed. We KNOW these laws are bullshit. We KNOW that we should be able to bring our arms. We KNOW there was fraud. We KNOW we have to do something.

The question I've been asking myself is: is showing up and possibly being arrested (and losing our guns at this moment going to help our cause?

Our group will be walking about a mile from where we are staying to the capital. If we encounter a group of officers who wish to (legally or not), apprehend us, take our guns, and lock us up while we are small and isolated, what is our recourse in that moment? What should we do? Do you believe we are at the point now where a reasonable response to that situation would be to resist and open fire?

I am sincerely looking for insight.

For several reasons, we are not sure that such a risk is one that we should be taking at the present moment. Why? Well, perhaps this is where we are mistaken - but I don't yet feel like we are at the "Lexington and Concord" of our era, where every other option has been exhausted. That's why I'm going to DC - to try and contribute to our presence and convey that I don't want us to have to go to the final option (war), but that WE WILL if they take all other options from us.

Let me repeat that last part - I DO care about my rights, but war is an option I want to avoid if at all possible. If we are robbed of all other options and are left only with an Appeal to Heaven, then I will know the only choice left is to fight and risk all that I hold dear.

I'm just not convinced that Jan 6th is that time. It is the stand for the LAST peaceful option, in my mind.

Do you disagree? If so, where have I gone astray in my thinking?

It sounds like you are of the belief that Jan 6 is the "last stand."

I, personally, feel like there are a few other options I want to see play out - like Trump's cases where he, himself is the plaintiff.

Very interested in learning more about your position and how you got to where you are at now. Do you feel as though every option has been exhausted?

If you are carrying on Jan 6 and are on your way to the large group, but are apprehended by officers en-route, what will you do? Resist? Open fire?

I would stash gear, go to rally/protest in DAYLiGHT, see what happens, and get back in DAYLiGHT. Individuals posting about open carry etc aren't wrong, but if you're going to see the president they aren't going to let anyone near him like that, probably also metal detectors for concealed carry. Even if you are just going perimeter wouldn't open carry unless you have the numbers it won't fly. Should Have better idea of where things stand after the day. Nothing wrong with martyrs ! But you don't sound like the best candidate.

You people take your fucking guns too. They can't arrest all of us. It's your right regardless of what bullshit laws have been passed there. This is what the 2nd amendment is for. This day is where we decide if freedom is real or if we are just going to let it sink into mud. This is what fighting for your country is really about. Not simply being in the military and dancing around on foreign soil over some bullshit proxy war over oil. This. Our country is under attack and corrupt by blackmail to do china's bidding. And to that we all say fuck you to all the sorry saps that got themselves into a predicament where the only way they can stay alive is to give our labor and taxed income to other countries for no reason. Fuck em all they will not be running this country any longer.

4 Guns are not illegal in DC, because laws that were illegally made are void.

▼ That said, do not expect there to be huge numbers of firearmed people to back up your decision to bring one, most people have logistical problems bringing them because it is too far to drive for most employed people around the country.
